Emily Hawk Mills is a partner in the law firm of Cusimano, Roberts & Mills located in Gadsden, Alabama. Emily practices personal injury law with a concentration in trucking wrecks and nursing home injuries. She represents clients who have catastrophic injuries including those with burns and traumatic brain injuries.

Emily has written and lectured on legal topics relating to trial practice, including teaching at AAJ's Trial and Deposition Colleges. She currently serves on the AAJ Board of Governors and previously served on the NCA College of Advocacy Board. She is Fellow of the American Bar Association and member of the Alabama Trial Lawyers' Association. She volunteers her time with her church and local community.

Emily earned her J.D. in 1999 from University of Alabama. She will tell you her greatest blessing is her family: her husband, son, and two chosen daughters.
